1. Would you be willing to provide free lending of circulating materials to COSELL members? Yes.

Comments: The Law Library at the University of North Carolina does not charge for lending circulating materials to any library.

2. Would you be willing to provide priority service to COSELL members? Probably.

Comments: The top priority for UNC would continue to be Duke University Law Library and the firm members of the Law Library Service program. Certainly, COSELL members could be considered a priority after those two groups. The turnaround time at UNC is minimal at the present. It would be important that the request be identified in a way that clearly identifies the borrower as a COSELL member. Also, the request could certainly be filled quicker if all requests were submitted through the OCLC interlibrary loan database.

3. Would you be willing to provide free photocopy services to COSELL members? Yes.

Comments: At the present the UNC Law Library requests very little material from other law libraries, except Duke University, in the Southeast. The library has a free photocopy arrangement with Duke already and staff anticipate very little need for free photocopy services from other southeastern law libraries. UNC would probably become a net lender and there is a question about the monies necessary to fund the service.

4. Would you be willing to provide free FAX services to COSELL members? Yes.

Comments: Similar response as #3.
